Property Investment Advisor's commentary

Income contributes strongly while politicians dither.

As in politics little has changed in the housing market since February. Capital values nationally are effectively unchanged and rental demand, and rental growth continues. The fundamental undersupply of good housing remains. Once again in March the Fund again showed a positive return net of fees.

First time buyers are still driving the market, but although the number of home movers remained constrained there was an increase in sales and purchases overall. The estimated number of monthly sales rose to 71,500, above the level in January and February, and slightly higher than in 2018. This represents a fair market, but a little below the level expected for this time of year.

The Housebuilders Federation reported levels of site visits down on a seasonally adjusted basis but new homes reservations from first-time buyers up strongly and from home movers up slightly. Reservations from Buy to Let investors fell yet again, demonstrating the impact of the tax changes impacting individual investors.

The LSL Acadata Index showed a flat market nationally but with significant regional variations. London and the South East showed modest annual falls but the South East with a small monthly increase, and there were gains in the West and East Midlands, Wales and the North West over both one month and one year. Even in London the picture is variable. The majority of the Fund's investments in Outer London are part of the Wembley Park regeneration in Brent, which remains a consistent performer over both one month and one year.

The March 2019 RICS UK Residential Survey results mirror the results from Acadata with a further small reduction in the volume of sales was reported but agents remain positive looking twelve months ahead. Tenant demand rose for the third successive month and rental growth expectations remain 2% for 2019 and averaging 3%pa through to 2024.
