Objective

The Fund's objective is to achieve a total return greater than on the NSCI (XIC) over the long term by investing in a diversified portfolio of small UK quoted companies.

Investment style: Value

Aberforth are value investors who buy shares in companies that they calculate to be selling below their intrinsic value. This is determined through detailed financial and industrial analysis, combined with a valuation approach that focuses on both stockmarket and corporate worth.

Investment performance (annualised total returns)

Notes: 1m & 3m returns not annualised; Launch date = 10 Dec 90; FTAS = FTSE All-Share Index.

Investment commentary

2015 got off to an interesting start with downward revisions to global growth, the Swiss abandoning the peg to the euro and the ECB embracing QE. European equities responded positively to Draghi's commitment, but gains made in local currency have been reduced to overseas investors by euro depreciation. The FTSE All-Share generated a positive total return in excess of that generated by the benchmark.

The portfolio added a modest amount of value to the benchmark despite the style data suggesting that January was a more helpful month for a growth investor. In terms of individual holdings there were no major individual winners but Flybe was a significant faller. This followed a trading update that revealed delays to the disposal of legacy aircraft, combined with a slower level of recovery than previously expected in the core business.

The significant decline in the oil price is placing pressure on oil company investment plans and share prices. These price declines have resulted in several mid cap oil companies becoming members of the benchmark at its January rebalancing and, somewhat counterintuitively, that sector's significance within the benchmark has increased. As value investors, we will naturally look to take advantage of any opportunities driven by an indiscriminate sell-off in share prices.

Risk warnings

- Capital may be at risk as the value of investments may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed; therefore investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, nor a reliable indicator of future results or performance.
- Investments in shares of smaller companies are generally considered to carry a higher degree of risk as the market for their shares may be less liquid than that for shares of larger companies, making shares of smaller companies more difficult to buy and sell.
- The performance of shares of smaller companies may be more volatile than the shares of larger companies over short time periods; therefore investors should regard such investments as long term.
- There can be no guarantee that the investment objective of a Fund will be achieved or provide the returns sought by the Fund.
- An investment trust is a public limited company, the shares of which are traded on the main market of the London Stock Exchange. Accordingly, the ability of shareholders to sell their shares will be dependent on the market price of the shares. The shares may trade at a discount or premium to their net asset value.
- Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as gearing. The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets.
