Market review

Uncertainty over US monetary policy and the prospect of tighter liquidity weighed on Asian equity markets during the half year. Southeast Asia took it especially hard, with poor economic data amplifying any misgivings about the region's recovery. Fund outflows also caused a rout in their currencies, which exaggerated stock market declines. North Asia held up better on expectations that exports would be revived by an improving US economy, which prompted the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) decision to start scaling back quantitative easing.

Portfolio review

At the stock level, QBE Insurance and City Developments detracted from performance, as did non-holding Tencent. In Australia, QBE fell sharply after it forecast a net loss of US$250 million for the year ended December. This followed a strategic review of its North American operations, which resulted in additional provisions, restructuring charges and a goodwill write-down that totalled US$1.93 billion. However, after our recent meetings with top management, we feel the company is taking the right steps to mend its US problems. Its basic business remains solid and the core underwriting unit profitable. In Singapore, City Developments was weighed down by signs of weakness in the mass market property segment, concerns of a Fed tapering and possibly higher interest rates. Although there will be short-term headwinds in the sector, we believe this is reflected in the stock's valuation. Also, the company is poised to capture the rebound in property prices over the long term. Meanwhile, non-holding Tencent detracted as the stock performed well. While we like its core business, what holds us back, aside from valuations, is the Chinese company's opaque ownership structure and transition from a PC-based to a mobile business, where competition is more intense.

Paring the losses were our holdings in Samsung Electronics, Rio Tinto and Wing Hang Bank. In Korea, Samsung's third-quarter operating profit rose to a record 10.1 trillion won. During its highly anticipated investor day, which we attended, the company focused on innovation and enhancing total shareholder returns. Rio Tinto also did well. The Australian miner is focused on cutting costs and capital expenditure while boosting volumes, in order to lower debt levels and maintain its progressive dividend policy to shareholders. Wing Hang rallied on initial talk that it was a takeover target. The Hong Kong-listed lender is now in exclusive negotiations with potential buyer Oversea-Chinese Banking Corporation from Singapore. Unlike Wing Hang, Oversea-Chinese Banking Corporation lagged on concerns that it would be overpaying for the proposed acquisition. However, we are supportive as long-term shareholders of both banks. The acquisition will enable Oversea-Chinese Banking Corporation to expand in greater China and Wing Hang has a decent franchise in Hong Kong. The issues we will raise with Oversea-Chinese Banking Corporation are its funding abilities and whether it has the capability to integrate this sizeable acquisition.

In portfolio activity, we participated in Bank of the Philippine Islands' attractively discounted rights issue. This will bring its tier-one capital ratio from 15.5% to 18%. The bank is poised to benefit from healthy loan demand as the domestic economy remains robust. We added to Hong Kong-listed trading company Li & Fung after it posted results that met our expectations. We also topped up Standard Chartered. While short-term weakness across emerging markets could weigh on its stock price, we have taken a long-term view. The bank's business franchise across its geographic operations remains intact, and it will benefit from increased trade flows. This is despite the surprise departure of its chief financial officer and head of consumer banking. Meanwhile, we would not be surprised if management decided to raise more capital, given its belief that a robust capital base is a competitive advantage, even though it already has a high capital ratio. Against this, we pared the position in insurer AIA Group on the back of share price strength.

Outlook

The current anxiety in markets could persist as the prospect of tighter liquidity and higher interest rates continue to influence sentiment. Emerging markets with gaping deficits would remain most vulnerable and a further retreat in their currencies could present a policy dilemma in a slow growth environment. India and Indonesia come to mind, although recent policy decisions have helped stabilise both countries. Consumers, meanwhile, appear to be holding back as household debt levels ratchet up, particularly in markets such as Malaysia and Thailand. That said, the recent pullback has actually been a good thing as it has taken the froth out of markets. The sooner stimulus is unwound, the better for markets as they can return to fundamentals. We believe fundamentals in Asia remain sound over the long term.

Risk and reward profile

The Risk and Reward Indicator table demonstrates where the Fund ranks in terms of its potential risk and reward. The higher the rank the greater the potential reward but the greater the risk of losing money. It is based on past data, may change over time and may not be a reliable indication of the future risk profile of the Fund. The shaded area in the table below shows the Fund's ranking on the Risk and Reward Indicator.

Typically lower rewards, lower risk				Typically higher rewards, higher risk
1	2	3	4	5	6	7

Risk and reward indicator table as at 31 January 2014.

- This Fund is ranked at 6 because funds of this type have experienced high rises and falls in value in the past.
- Please note that even the lowest risk class can lose you money and that extreme market circumstances can mean you suffer severe losses in all cases. The indicator does not take into account the following risks of investing in this Fund:
- Exchange Rates: Investing globally can bring additional returns and diversify risk. However, currency exchange rate fluctuations may have a positive or negative impact on the value of your investment.
- Emerging Markets: Emerging markets or less developed countries may face more political, economic or structural challenges than developed countries. This may mean your money is at greater risk.
- A full list of risks applicable to this Fund can be found in the Prospectus.
- The latest risk and reward profile can be found on the Key Investor Information Document (KIID) for this Fund which is available on our website at www.aberdeen-asset.co.uk
