Market Review

UK equities made steady progress during the six months under review as the equity risk premium continued to decline. Investors were encouraged by an on-going improvement in the US economy, allied with continued stability in Europe. Surprisingly for a cyclical bull market, the advance was led by the more 'defensive' sectors where valuations have perhaps been most impacted by central bank action. The recent turbulence in global financial markets illustrates the impact unconventional monetary policy has had on equity markets. Late in the period the Federal Reserve announced that it would begin to reduce (taper) its level of asset purchases earlier than the markets previously anticipated. The Federal Reserve asserts that tapering is only the first step along a very long road to a more 'normalised' monetary policy. However, the significant distortions across all asset classes brought about by such a policy, and its unprecedented nature, suggest that markets may well take time to adjust. As a consequence, volatility will likely remain high. Nonetheless, investors should remember that this change of policy has been brought about by an improvement in the global economic environment.

Portfolio Review

The fund outperformed the benchmark during the review period due to positive stock selection. At a stock specific level the fund enjoyed strong performances from a number of our consumer cyclical holdings including Ryanair, Sports Direct, and William Hill. Both Ryanair and Sports Direct benefitted from excellent operational performance, alongside reduced competition and improved industry pricing. William Hill, the UK's largest bookmaker, continued its transition towards an internet gaming business by making a number of acquisitions, including that of Sportingbet Plc. With the contribution from internet gaming continuing to increase, we think the shares can make further progress.

The main detractors to performance were the fund's oil and gas positions, which were under pressure as investors fretted over the long-term outlook for the oil price. While the development of unconventional hydrocarbon resources has potentially significant implications – not least for the attractiveness of the US as a manufacturing location – we remain unconvinced that it dramatically alters the longer-term dynamics of the energy sector.

A reduction in defensive positions as they reached our price targets was the main change in the portfolio. Conversely, the financial weighting was increased.

Outlook

Despite the strong performance of equities over the last twelve months, we continue to believe that equities are the most attractive asset class and that markets can grind higher. We remain overweight cyclical sectors and underweight defensives, where we think valuations are most stretched.
