Objective

The aim of this Fund is to provide long-term capital growth.

Fund manager's commentaryMain changes to the portfolio during November

There were no major changes to the portfolio during the month.

Factors affecting performance during November

The MSCI World Index rose by 9.3% while the technology sector underperformed, with the MSCI World Information Technology Index gaining 9.1%.

Equity markets were driven higher by the positive news around COVID-19 vaccines as well as the certainty of the US presidential election after Democrat nominee Joe Biden's victory.

The top-performing stocks within the Fund included automotive semiconductor companies Ambarella and Cree, and semiconductor capital equipment leader Applied Materials. Cloud-based provider of sales and marketing software Hubspot, and cybersecurity company Palo Alto Networks also delivered strong returns during the month.

Current market influences and outlook

Most companies have now reported their third-quarter results, and these have been largely positive for the technology sector.

For those companies in the MSCI World Index, representing the broader market, that have so far reported their third-quarter financial results, 66% have reported better-than-expected revenues and 74% reported better-than-expected earnings, while for the technology component of the same index, the results were 80% for both metrics. For the Fund, these figures are 96% and 93%, respectively.

With many parts of Europe having entered another lockdown during November, and data in the US worsening, we are aware that there will continue to be negative economic effects as a result of the pandemic. However, we continue to believe that the long-term thematic approach we take when identifying investments will help us focus on companies with long-term growth opportunities in areas such as cloud computing, cybersecurity and digital payments.

Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The value of investments and the income from them can fall as well as rise and you may not get back the full amount originally invested. Before investing you should read the fund's Key Investor Information Document (KIID) for full product details including investment risks and contact a financial adviser where unsure.
