Commentary

30 June 2022

After a very disappointing opening quarter, investment returns across most asset classes continued to register heavy falls in the second quarter. The combination of a dire inflation outlook and interest rate rises sparked fears of a slowdown in the global economy that weighed heavily on investor sentiment. Volatility in commodity markets also persisted, with further increases in oil and gas prices adding to investor concerns over global growth as the war in Ukraine rumbled on. However, fears of a global recession knocked industrial metals prices, with many registering their first quarterly fall since the onset of the pandemic.

In the UK, equity and bond markets fell in June in the wake of a continued deterioration in the macroeconomic and geopolitical environment. Inflation has spiked this year, fed by elevated energy and food prices plus supply constraints. In the US, investor sentiment deteriorated as the Federal Reserve acknowledged the possibility that the economy could be tipped into recession by interest rates being raised aggressively to combat high inflation.

In currency markets, the US dollar was the best-performing major currency in the G10 group of industrialised nations as investors began to factor in more aggressive interest rate hikes from the US Federal Reserve.

UK commercial property made a solid start to the quarter, with real estate investors seemingly unperturbed by the gyrations seen in other asset classes.

The M&G Treasury & Investment Office (T&IO) outlook is cautious as much uncertainty remains.
