April 2025 Investment Summary

A negative month for the Passive range with returns ranging from -1.52% for Passive 5 to +0.05% for Passive 1.

*P Acc share class with data sourced from FE analytics as at 30 April 2025

April 2025 was a challenging month for markets and the portfolios, in absolute terms.

In an especially volatile month, most major equity markets fell, as President Trump's 'liberation day' tariffs sparked a sell off in equity markets. Stocks started to recover from losses after a 90 day pause of tariffs was announced. Emerging Markets outperformed supported by positive returns in Latin America and their relatively lower tariffs from the US. The FTSE 100 fell 0.7%, after lower performance from energy and financial sectors and the announcement of 10% US tariffs. The Stoxx 600 reduced 0.5% following the 'liberation day' fallout, but Germany's agreement to form a new government provided some relief. The S&P 500 decreased 0.7% but Nasdaq rose 0.9%. Sector performance saw technology, staples and communications rise with the largest falls seen in energy and healthcare. US/ China trade tensions improved over the month with China's ministry of commerce commenting that it's now evaluating trade talks with the US.

The US market's tech sector pressure eased, with mega cap stocks such as Meta, Microsoft and Apple reporting positive earnings. 10 year US Government bond yields were range-bound through the month, ending at 4.17%, from 4.23% and reaching highs of 4.48%. The Federal Reserve held interest rates last month, as officials stated the presidents tariffs had been "significantly larger than expected" adding that "the same was likely to be true of the economic effects, including higher inflation and slower growth". Expectations are for the Federal Reserve to hold rates at the next meeting in May.

April's US labour market data showed payrolls increased by 177,000, surpassing forecasts in a sign of continued resilience, despite worries over the impact of President Trump's sweeping tariffs against trade partners. Unemployment was unchanged at 4.2%. US consumer confidence reached its lowest level since May 2020, falling for a fifth consecutive month. Households are increasingly uncomfortable about expected price rises because of the widespread tariffs imposed and its toll on future US growth.

Middle East tensions remain. The Israeli military struck Beirut in Lebanon again last week as it targeted a Hezbollah store of "precision guided missiles" applying further pressure on the current ceasefire agreement. The conflict's impact remains limited on the global economy, with lower oil prices more attributable to trade tensions and increased production from Saudi Arabia.

The economic environment has been resilient so far. The brief 90 day pause in targeted tariff implementation may give world leaders and policy makers temporary respite, despite broad 10% tariffs already being in effect. We expect markets to remain volatile as countries now pivot their efforts to negotiate with the US. The multi-asset portfolios are globally diversified investing across equities, fixed income and other assets, including Real Estate and Alternatives. Within equities regional differentiation may continue to be an important theme and aid in risk management during uncertainty.
