June 2022 Investment Summary

A negative month for the Passive range with returns ranging from -3.65%^ for Passive 2 to -4.22%^ for Passive 5.

^P Acc share class with data sourced from FE analytics as at 30 June 2022

June was another difficult month. Concerns over Ukraine and inflation still dominating investors thinking. With this backdrop, clearly all eyes continue to be on the major central banks.

Numerous data releases towards the end of the month started to paint, on balance, a more negative picture about the health of the global economy. Euro area inflation rose 8.6% for the year to June; 0.5% higher than May and higher than expectations. In the US, sentiment readings from the Dallas and Richmond Fed continued their dour tone of the prior month, with the Dallas manufacturing index falling to -17.7 in June compared to -7.3 a month earlier. The Richmond manufacturing index fell to -11 from -9, while the Chicago PMI also fell slightly to 56 in June versus 60.3 in May.

The real litmus test these coming weeks will be if the negative sentiment from both consumers and companies, combined with elevated inflation numbers, have caused corporate America to soften their profit outlook, as reporting season for Q2 2022 will be underway shortly. We remain alive to the prospect that another bout of volatility could be triggered if corporates materially downgrade their forecasts for the rest of the year.

The ECB summit showed no let-up in central bank hawkishness, continuing to walk the tightrope of balancing a slowdown in economic growth and a less optimistic economic outlook against a backdrop of stubbornly high inflation.

However, medium term market pricing of inflation suggests an expectation that inflation will eventually fall back, and markets are pricing in an increasing risk that this is at the cost of a contraction in output. The economic side effects of the continuing war in Ukraine on energy and soft commodity markets as well as the scars on supply chains left by COVID-19 provide additional complexity and uncertainty when calibrating monetary policy.

LF Prudential Risk Managed Passive - Tactical asset allocation activity

The portfolio manager maintains a small overweight position in US and UK equities and also added to China equities during the month. The overweight to property remains. With inflation concerns the portfolios managers feel these moves reduce risk in aggregate.
