Prudential Risk Rating

Higher Risk
These are specialist equity funds that focus on set geographical regions or a particular type of share e.g. shares of smaller companies or those that conform to certain criteria.

These risk ratings have been developed by Prudential to help provide an indication of a fund's potential level of risk and reward based on the type of assets which may be held by the fund. Other companies may use different descriptions and as such these risk ratings should not be considered as generic across the fund management industry.

We regularly review our fund risk ratings, so they may change in the future. If, in our view, there is a material change in the fund's level of risk, for example due to a significant change to the assets held by the fund or in the way the fund is managed, we will provide information on the new risk rating. We recommend that you make sure you understand the risk rating of any fund before you invest.

You should also consider discussing your decision and the appropriateness of a fund's risk rating with an adviser.

Important Information

- Some funds may invest in 'underlying' funds or other investment vehicles. The performance of our fund, compared to what it's invested in won't be exactly the same. That can be due to additional charges, cash management (needed to help people to enter and leave our fund when they want), tax and the timing of investments (this is known as a fund's dealing cycle, it varies between managers and can be several days).

Commentary

Performance as at Q1 2022 - In addition to ongoing worries about rising inflation, the period saw heightened geopolitical tension in the run up to Russia's invasion of Ukraine, leading to widespread risk aversion. The fund fell over the quarter and was behind the FTSE All-Share Index. The UK Equity Dividend Fund outperformed its index, but the rest of the underlying funds lagged behind their respective indices.

In a volatile quarter for equity markets, the M&G Recovery Fund was held back by the underperformance of the biotech holdings, largely reflecting a sell-off in growth stocks. In addition, although the fund is overweight energy companies, its holdings in BP and Tullow Oil underperformed Shell, which it does not own.

The first quarter was a disappointing start to 2022 for the UK Equity Growth Fund, as the macroeconomic environment did not suit a portfolio of sustainably oriented quality compounders. Large below-market exposures to basic materials and energy caused the fund to lag as commodity prices have soared.

The M&G Smaller Companies Fund's performance was held back by stock selection and, to a lesser extent, sector allocation. An above-index exposure to technology and a below-index presence in energy stocks held back returns. Individual detractors included law firm Knights Group, which announced weaker trading due to the Omicron variant of the new coronavirus and investors were concerned about prospects for its revenues.

Finally, the UK Equity Dividend Fund benefited from a strong rotation into the high yield segment of the market and a pick-up in momentum within value stocks. These are generally higher income-paying and more economically sensitive stocks, a natural hunting ground for the fund. The main individual contributors were focused in the resources sector and included the Anglo-Australian mining behemoths Rio Tinto and BHP, oil major BP, USbased gas producer Diversified Energy Company and biomass electricity generator Drax.
