Prudential Risk Rating

Higher Risk

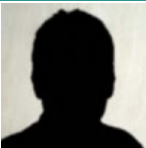

These are specialist equity funds that focus on set geographical regions or a particular type of share e.g. shares of smaller companies or those that conform to certain criteria.

These risk ratings have been developed by Prudential to help provide an indication of a fund's potential level of risk and reward based on the type of assets which may be held by the fund. Other companies may use different descriptions and as such these risk ratings should not be considered as generic across the fund management industry.

We regularly review our fund risk ratings, so they may change in the future. If, in our view, there is a material change in the fund's level of risk, for example due to a significant change to the assets held by the fund or in the way the fund is managed, we will provide information on the new risk rating. We recommend that you make sure you understand the risk rating of any fund before you invest.

You should also consider discussing your decision and the appropriateness of a fund's risk rating with an adviser.

Important Information

- Some funds may invest in 'underlying' funds or other investment vehicles. The performance of our fund, compared to what it's invested in won't be exactly the same. That can be due to additional charges, cash management (needed to help people to enter and leave our fund when they want), tax and the timing of investments (this is known as a fund's dealing cycle, it varies between managers and can be several days).

Commentary

Performance as at Q2 2025 - The UK equity market made gains over the quarter, although it underperformed most other developed stock markets. Both the FTSE 100 and the FTSE All-Share indices hit all-time highs towards the end of the quarter. The industrials sector was the strongest area of the market, followed by telecoms and financials. The weakest sectors were energy, healthcare and materials.

Investors took heart from some positive news on trade. In May, the UK became the first country to agree a trade deal with the US since the announcement of President Trump's tariff regime. The deal reduced tariffs on the UK's automobile and aerospace exports. In the same month, the UK government announced a post-Brexit agreement with the EU, which will remove some regulations on food and drink exports and imports, as well as protecting steel exports from tariffs.

Economic news was mixed. The UK economy grew in the first quarter of the year, but there were some signs of slowing growth in the second. The annual rate of inflation rose sharply from 2.6% in March to 3.5% in April and remained high in May at 3.4%.

The Bank of England (BoE) left its benchmark interest rate unchanged in April but lowered it by 25 basis points in May to 4.25%. As inflation proved stubbornly high, however, the BoE made no further changes to rates in June. Bank officials also pointed to an uncertain global situation in the commentary that accompanied their decision.
