Investment Objective and Policy

The investment objective of the MI Thornbridge Global Opportunities Fund is to seek capital and income growth from investments identified across global equity and/or bond markets. The manager may also choose to hold Government securities, collective investment schemes, cash and money market instruments as appropriate in achieving the overall objective of the Sub-fund.

Investment Manager's Report

Just one sector in the MSCI World Index produced a negative return (measured in USD) during the six-month interim period: Energy (-1.1%), yet a notable contributor to the Sub-fund's performance came from that very sector - Gazprom. Gazprom supplies around 37% of Europe's natural gas needs and has completed the first part of a pipeline project that will make China its second largest customer. Furthermore, with a major capital expenditure programme now having peaked, management is moving towards a dividend policy of 50% of IFRS net income. The company's shares finished the year trading at just 6 times its forecasted earnings, well below the MSCI World Index average.

The contribution of Gazprom is one example of a theme that regular readers of the Sub-fund's monthly factsheet will be familiar with – the holdings of the Sub-fund, and in particular its top 10, often differs to some of the more common stocks in global large-cap equity funds. Like many funds, yours benefited from the performance of a very familiar US company which is known for its leisure footwear. But rather than owning Nike, it was Skechers which contributed to Sub-fund performance. Nike hit a record high during the interim period. Nike is a great brand with a dominant market position and a market capitalisation in excess of $150bn, but we could see little upside to the forward multiple at which its shares trade. Instead, Skechers was more appealing to us: a company which was growing sales in North America and in its international operations, growing its direct-to-consumer business (in theory, higher margin sales), is currently trading at half the multiple of Nike, based on forecasted earnings, and with a "bite-sized" market cap of $6bn in comparison to its larger peer.

The reason your Sub-fund doesn't own the likes of big names such as Nike, Visa, MasterCard or Amazon is because our value-based investment approach means that their shares prices don't offer what we consider a reasonable risk-reward profile. Quite often, such stocks are trading at thirty or more times forward earnings. We don't think there is sufficient upside for the risk – a company on 30x forward earnings is priced for growth. If, for whatever reason, those earnings do not materialise and investors rush for the exit, even if the share price halves, it is still barely below the market's average multiple. In contrast, we tend to look for companies whose earnings are forecast to grow, which generate free cash flow, but also whose share price offers an attractive potential upside and a margin of safety in the event that their share prices pulls back. The approach does not always play out and those that study markets will be well aware of the challenging time value stocks have had relative to their growth peers over the past five years or so. But we will continue to invest in companies if we think it makes sense, rather than follow trends.

The interim period wasn't without its disappointments. One detractor was US media group CBS, which is now part of the merged ViacomCBS, and a stock the Sub-fund continues to hold. Critics will argue that ViacomCBS is a classic value trap that has been caught out by the streaming revolution. Our investment thesis is pretty simple: the likes of Disney and Apple have joined the list of those offering streaming subscriptions, following the lead shown by Netflix. To entice and retain monthly paying consumers, content, both new and an established back catalogue, is crucial. Viacom and CBS hold both in abundance: Viacom is the owner of established brands such as Comedy Central, Nickelodeon, MTV and the Paramount Network. Meanwhile, CBS has an established TV production studios and national broadcast network business, including valuable sports rights. In the preceding paragraph, we noted that we will continue to invest in companies if we think it makes sense, and one of the questions we ask ourselves is — would acquiring this business make sense to a rational businessperson? In that regard, ViacomCBS makes sense to us: in an age where content is king, it owns a vast catalogue of television shows and films, generates positive cash from operations and has a market cap of just over $20bn. Furthermore, to us it makes more sense to us than investing in Netflix — a company which generated negative $2.9bn in cash from operations in the year ended 31 December 2019, as it continues to spend heavily on producing and purchasing content to keep and grow subscribers as streaming competition intensifies, and yet whose market capitalisation is $160bn.

Finally, as we look ahead to 2020, it is interesting to contrast the market's positive return in the interim period ended 31.12.2019 to the previous one. The prior interim period to 31.12.2018 ended with investor sentiment very negative: the market had contracted markedly in December 2018 and investors entered January 2019 with a sense of trepidation. However, the MSCI World Index returned almost 28% in 2019 (measured in USD), contrary to negative sentiment and headlines surrounding trade tariffs and global growth. It's a useful example of why we will not make big macro calls or bets; nobody can know what will happen tomorrow. So we will continue to invest in companies which to us make sound investment sense, regardless of the geopolitical background.

^{*} The ACD believes that this ongoing charge is representative of charges going forward.

Operating charges include indirect costs incurred in the maintenance and running of the Sub-fund, as disclosed (but not limited to) the detailed expenses within the Statement of Total Return. The figures used within this table have been calculated by annualising the expenses incurred against the average Net Asset Value for the accounting period.

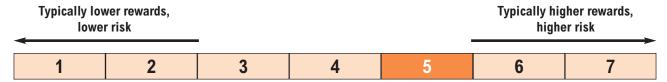

The return after charges is calculated as the closing NAV per share plus the distributions on income shares minus the opening net asset value per share as a % of the opening net asset value per share.

Direct transaction costs include fees, commissions, transfer taxes and duties in the purchasing and selling of investments, which are offset (where applicable) against any dilution levies charged within the accounting period. The figures used within the table have been calculated against the average Net Asset Value for the accounting period.

The basis of valuation of investments used to calculate net asset value per share complies with requirements of the current Statement of Recommended Practice for UK Authorised Funds. This differs from the basis used to calculate daily published single prices, in which listed investments are valued at 12:00 mid prices.

Risk and reward profile

The Risk and Reward Indicator table demonstrates where the Sub-fund ranks in terms of its potential risk and reward. The higher the rank the greater the potential reward but the greater the risk of losing money. It is based on past data, may change over time and may not be a reliable indication of the future risk profile of the Sub-fund. The shaded area in the table below shows the Sub-fund's ranking on the Risk and Reward Indicator.

The Sub-fund is ranked 5 because funds of this type have experienced medium to high rises and falls in value in the past. Please note that even the lowest risk class can lose you money and that extreme market circumstances can mean you suffer severe losses in all cases. The indicator does not take into account the following risks of investing in this Sub-fund:

- Investing overseas can bring additional returns and spread risk to different markets. There are risks, however, that changes in currency exchange rates may cause the value of your investment to decrease and increase.
- Emerging markets or less developed countries may face more political, economic or structural challenges than developed countries. This means your money is at greater risk.
- In difficult market conditions, the value of some investments may be less predictable than normal and the Sub-fund may not be able to buy and sell these investments at the best time or at a fair price. This could affect the Sub-fund's performance, potentially reducing your returns.
- The level of targeted income is not guaranteed and may not be achieved.
- · For further risk information please see the prospectus.

Risk warning

An investment in an Open Ended Investment Company should be regarded as a medium to long-term investment. Investors should be aware that the price of shares and the revenue from them can fall as well as rise and investors may not receive back the full amount invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance. Investments denominated in currencies other than the base currency are subject to fluctuation in exchange rates, which can be favourable or unfavourable.
