Commentary

May 2026 Investment Summary

A positive month for the Active range with returns ranging from +1.11% (Active 1) to +2.69% (Active 5).

*P Acc share class; FE analytics, 31 May 2026.

May saw continued tech-led expansion for markets, supporting positive portfolio returns.

Equity markets largely looked through near-term geopolitical and macroeconomic noise, building on April's recovery and pushing several major indices to fresh all-time highs. Market sentiment was supported by a combination of strong corporate earnings and reports that a US-Iran deal to end the conflict might be moving closer - sending oil prices to their lowest level in over a month. Q1 earnings season beat expectations by more than usual, especially within the US where earnings grew 30% year-on-year, driven mainly by the technology sector. European earnings were more moderate (closer to 5% growth) reflecting weaker macroeconomic momentum across the Eurozone. In Asia and emerging markets, earnings growth remained robust, particularly in semiconductor-heavy markets such as South Korea and Taiwan. The FTSE 100 edged up +0.7%, with financials benefiting from elevated interest rates and mining stocks supported by metal prices. The Stoxx 600 increased +3.2%, led by Financial, Energy and Technology sectors. The S&P 500 extended a rally that has now delivered eight straight weekly gains, the longest streak since late 2023 rising +5.3% and Nasdaq surged an additional +8.4%, powered by exceptional semiconductor performance and mega cap AI demand.

President Trump signalled that a peace deal was "largely negotiated" with reports pointing to a potential 60-day ceasefire extension that would see the Strait of Hormuz reopened and Iranian mines cleared, in exchange for sanctions waivers on Iranian oil exports. Despite both sides remaining actively engaged in negotiations, tensions appeared to flare once again, with the US launching "self-defence" strikes on Iranian military infrastructure, which was met with retaliatory strikes, an attack on a US airbase and a promise of "more decisive" responses to further aggression.

Stronger US economic data added to concerns that inflation may remain persistent. Payrolls rose by 115,000 in April, marking a second consecutive month above 100,000. Inflation surprised to the upside increasing again from 3.3% to 3.8%, with core inflation also edging higher to 2.8%. Energy-related pressures linked to geopolitical developments were a contributing factor. As a result markets and policymakers broadly expect interest rates to remain near current levels for now, reflecting a cautious monetary stance.

UK political developments drove bond volatility this month. 10-year bond yields briefly rose to 5.17% - a post 2008 high – amid leadership pressure on Keir Starmer and fiscal uncertainty linked to Andy Burnham's emergence. However, yields fell back later in the month after reassurance from him on fiscal discipline, ending around 20 basis points lower overall.

Looking ahead, markets remain highly sensitive to geopolitical developments, particularly in the Middle East. Ongoing uncertainty around energy supply, inflation and growth is likely to drive continued volatility. Nevertheless, corporate earnings remain resilient, and there are limited signs of an imminent global recession, supporting a constructive medium-term outlook.
