Fund manager's report

Global equities rose in most major currencies in June, boosted by expectations of central bank easing, a weaker US dollar and receding trade tensions. The Federal Reserve chief Jay Powell suggested that the central bank may ease policy if the US economy is threatened by trade tariffs, while the European Central Bank signalled the possibility of policy cuts and restarting quantitative easing. US stocks reached an all-time high. Crude oil prices rose following an Iranian attack on a US drone.

Meanwhile, macroeconomic data was dismal. A global manufacturing leading indicator dipped into contraction territory, its lowest level since 2012. US consumer sentiment was lower than expected, while China's industrial output reached a 17-year low in May. Exports in the economic bellwethers of Japan, South Korea and Singapore fell.

In fund-related corporate news, a senior Samsung Electronics employee was questioned by prosecutors who were probing a suspected cover-up of an alleged US$3.9 billion accounting fraud at a group affiliate. Samsung refuted the allegations.

Elsewhere, exchange and financial data firm Intercontinental Exchange (ICE) planned to launch a heating oil futures contract in July, challenging the incumbent New York Mercantile Exchange owned by CME Group. Alphabet's Google acquired cloud-platform firm Looker for US$2.6 billion to bolster its cloud business. Separately, another unit outlined plans to transform part of Toronto into a model for urban redevelopment.

We exited British telco Vodafone due to near-term competitive challenges, as well as fastfood chain operator Yum China due to longer-term concerns about its business proposition. We trimmed Israeli cybersecurity firm Check Point Software.

Against these, we took advantage of recent share-price weakness to add to pan-Asian insurer AIA Group and Singapore lender OCBC. We also topped up derivatives exchange operator CME Group, US warehouse-club chain operator Costco, German eyewear firm Fielmann, US tech firm Microsoft, Israeli software solutions provider Nice Systems and US managed healthcare company UnitedHealth Group for their long-term prospects.
