Market Commentary

Year-to-date, global financial markets have exhibited resilience amidst a backdrop of significant challenges and opportunities. Equities have generally trended upwards, buoyed by robust corporate earnings and ongoing fiscal stimulus measures. Major indices in the United States, Europe, and Asia have reached record highs, reflecting investor optimism about the post-pandemic recovery.

Fixed income markets have experienced volatility as central banks grapple with inflationary pressures and the prospect of tapering pandemic-era stimulus measures. The Federal Reserve and other central banks have signalled intentions to gradually reduce asset purchases leading to fluctuations in bond yields and investor sentiment.

Geopolitical tensions, including trade disputes and regional conflicts, have added an additional layer of uncertainty to global markets. Rising tensions between the United States and China, as well as ongoing geopolitical risks in the Middle East and Eastern Europe, have prompted the committee to closely monitor geopolitical developments for potential market impacts.

Overall, while global financial markets have faced a variety of challenges year-to-date, including inflation concerns, supply chain disruptions, and geopolitical risks, they have largely remained resilient. Improving economic data has bolstered confidence in the prospects for sustained recovery, although uncertainties remain as markets navigate the evolving landscape.

The IA (Investment Association) Flexible Investment Sector is used as the comparator. This is considered appropriate for investors to use when comparing performance as the Sub-fund is a member of this sector, which is made up of funds with a similar strategy as defined by the IA. The sector is not constructed as an Index, therefore as funds enter or leave the sector composition can change, but it is considered that the sector remains a useful and relevant comparator for investors to assess performance within a relevant peer group.
