(2) MSCI World Index in Sterling, net dividends reinvested, priced at close of business US time, source: MSCI Inc. The MSCI World Index is a generic portfolio of global equities across all sectors and, as such, is a fair comparison given the Fund is also global and sector agnostic.

(5) A (retail) class AMC 0.9% / I (institutional) class AMC 0.7%. (I-class for sums over £1m or at manager's discretion).
(6) This figure will reduce if the fund increases in size: £30,000 of fixed costs over £10m = 0.30% but only 0.03% over £100m, for example.
(7) The fund normally only buys and sells positions once a month to keep trading costs as low as possible.

Monthly Commentary (February 2024)

During February the GMAF gained 1%, while UK bonds were down 1.3%. There were no purchases but one sale in global infrastructure. As we entered March the fund was around 92% invested in risk assets.

As we view economies and financial markets in early 2024, it is worth recalling how turbulent the last fifteen years have been. The 2008/9 financial crash presaged a period of ultra-low interest rates, which only began to reverse in 2016. In late 2019 the policy response to the global pandemic was the reintroduction of those minimal interest rates. Lax monetary policy combined with high energy and commodity prices and, later, the Ukraine war produced a global surge in inflation causing central banks to reverse monetary policy from 2022. Against such a backdrop it can hardly be back to “business as usual”.

That said, the US economy looks superficially in remarkably good shape: GDP growing at 3.3%, the CPI down to 3.3% and strong employment, but a budget deficit of 6.3% is potentially worrying in the context of the USA's debt pile and credit rating. The Chinese economy, a global dynamo for decades, is faltering. Japan has shaken off its deflationary spiral to a certain extent and the Euro Area and UK hover around zero growth with inflation moderating. As we've said many times before, however, financial markets rarely move in line with economies. The evidence of history is that it is entirely possible for Wall Street to perform well when Main Street is struggling.

Notwithstanding geopolitical, economic and political concerns, the S&P 500 has hit an all-time high, driven by the “magnificent seven” tech stocks. Europe has also scaled an all-time peak driven by its own “GRANOLAS” stocks. Japan's Nikkei 225 has at last surpassed the peak of 34 years ago. Bitcoin is also at another all time high, and gold is up 11.3% year on year. Given the fund is currently 92% in risk assets, we will not complain if markets continue to “melt-up” as the year goes on.

Key Risks

- Counterparty risk: The Fund can conclude various transactions with contractual partners. If a contractual partner becomes insolvent, it can no longer or can only partly settle unpaid debts owed to the Fund.

— Market Risk: External factors can cause an entire asset class to decline in value which would result in a decrease in the value of investments. The Fund aims to mitigate this risk by investing in all major asset classes in many geographic regions and owning assets which are often negatively correlated.

— Concentration Risk: The Fund seeks to minimise concentration risk by owning
- a wide selection of Exchange Traded Funds which themselves own many hundreds of underlying assets.

— Liquidity Risk: adverse market conditions may affect the ability to sell certain assets when necessary. The Fund invests nearly exclusively in large, liquid ETFs so liquidity risk should be significantly lower than in a more conventional actively managed fund investing in single assets.
